"The volumes that have been issued at rare intervals from Mr. Roberts's Lincolnshire press are among the most accomplished specimens of bibliography which have been produced in England.... There can be no question that the work before us is a most elegant and desirable one."—Academy, May 24, 1879.

"We lately had occasion to speak of Mr. Roberts and his fondness for sumptuous reprints of Old English authors. The present volume may be called the masterpiece of its printer.... The ornaments are the truly remarkable feature of the volume. They are so good that it is to be regretted that they are not catalogued with reference to their sources. We are sorry to learn that with this volume Mr. Roberts's career as a printer is to close. We in England can ill afford to lose one of the very few men who have really made an effort to treat printing as a fine art.... Do what we will we can seldom attain to the perfection of the French in this department; but Mr. Roberts at his best is not far behind them.

"Hallam was quite right when he called it 'a book of genius.'..... What copiousness of wisdom in the treatment of the separate departments of life! What a grasp of the whole conditions of private and public happiness! Religion, education, labour, punishment, service, marriage, the treatment of the sick, the disposal of the dead, warfare, social life, amusements—everything is touched upon.... The difficulty is to find a sentence that is not striking, so rich is More's mind, so vivid the English of his Elizabethan translator. But now that Mr. Roberts has given everyone a fresh opportunity of reading the whole book, we may with the less unwillingness abridge our quotations."—Saturday Review, May 3, 1879.
